

Kyle has been struggling to find parking at UofSC every semester. Any time he actually ends up finding a spot it's in a lot that so far away from campus it takes forever to walk to his class.

Kyle had heard about a new app going around campus called College Cars.

He checks one of the lots that's usually full and decides to see how accurate the app is

Kyle checks the spot on the way there to let people on the app know that he is heading to take that spot

Kyle arrives at the spot and sees that it's open. The app reminds him that after 4 hours it will notify him that his spot will expire in the app soon in order to see if he wants the spot still.

Kyle goes to his class happy that he doesn't have to walk a mile today